DiCicco, Gulman & Co. presented three workshops at the 25th Annual Build Boston - November 18th - 19th

November 24, 2009 - Front Section

DiCicco, Gulman & Company LLP (DGC), a CPA and business advisory firm specializing in the accounting and financial matters of private companies, presented three workshops at the 25th Annual Build Boston event.

These workshops were beneficial for architects, residential designers, urban planners, engineers, builders, building owners/managers, developers, contractors, environmental professionals, facility managers/owners, and finance management professionals that take an active role in the overall business of their organization.

Workshop outlines: Capitalizing on government contracts: re-examine your overhead rate status. The competition for government contracts is fierce. To win those contracts you need to understand the complexities surrounding government overhead rate regulations. This session includes an overview of the audit process, unallowable costs, and controls and systems required to comply with government standards.

Top tax strategies for A/E/C professionals Proactive tax planning is a smart business practice. Being able to identify potential tax credits and qualify for deductions can result in significant cost savings in the long run. This session highlights tax incentives available to the AEC industry and how to capitalize on them and we provide an update on the latest legislation.

Presented by: Stephen Minson and Joel Rothenberg, DiCicco, Gulman & Company LLP
