Bailey of JSA Inc passes professional Architectural Registration Examination

December 01, 2009 - Northern New England

Tim Bailey of JSA Inc has passed the professional Architectural Registration Examinations.

The examination, prepared by the National Council of Architectural Registration Board, formally licenses architects. Each candidate for must have earned a professional degree in architecture, completed an internship, and obtain a passing score in all divisions of the ARE, which include: building design & construction systems, building systems, construction documents & services, programming planning & practice, schematic design, site planning & design, and structural systems. Employed at JSA for the past two years, Bailey has been involved with projects in the firm's senior living, healthcare, education and housing studios. He earned a Bachelor of Architecture degree from Roger Williams University and studied at the Institute of Fine Arts at Palazzo Rucellai in Florence, Italy Bailey and is a member of the American Institute of Architects.

"From early childhood on, I was always drawing buildings," said Bailey. "It is rare to know with such certainty what profession fits your talents. I feel fortunate to have turned my lifelong goal into a reality."

"We are excited that Tim has completed his licensing process," said Mark Moeller, design principal for JSA. "He is a key member of a dedicated group of emerging young architects at JSA. Tim has demonstrated a real passion for this field and we look forward to his continued success."
