Hanright joins Diversified Project Management as project manager

December 22, 2009 - Front Section

According to Diversified Project Management (DPM), Nancy Hanright has joined the firm as project manager.

"We are excited about the addition of Hanright to our staff," said Bob Keeley, DPM's president. "She has extensive project management and equipment planning experience in the Healthcare sector and will add even more value and expertise to our already-established project team."

Hanright has over 19 years of experience in planning and project management and her proficiency includes design services, construction administration, move & medical equipment planning.

Prior to joining Diversified, she held project management positions at Massachusetts Eye & Ear, Harvard Vanguard and New England Financial/Met Life where she provided comprehensive healthcare department, lab and office relocation planning services.

Hanright earned her bachelor's degree in Business Administration from Emmanuel College in Boston and has also received Environment of Care Training for Joint Commission (JCAHO).

Diversified Project Management is headquartered in Newton, Mass. with offices in Hartford and Stamford, Conn.
