Washington Trust opens 18th branch office at 1473 Warwick Ave.

January 06, 2010 - Rhode Island

Washington Trust celebrated the opening of its 18th branch office, located at 1473 Warwick Ave., with a ceremony for local officials, businesses, and customers. Washington Trust chairman and chief executive officer, John Warren, and bank president and chief operating officer, Joseph MarcAurele greeted guests to the facility.

"It is a pleasure to welcome Washington Trust's second branch to our city," said Warwick mayor Scott Avedisian.

"Just as Washington Trust is known for its stellar customer service, it is also known for its deep involvement in Rhode Island. Washington Trust's support of local organizations is a testament to their investment in our communities."

"We've had tremendous success at our Centreville Road branch in Warwick, so we're thrilled to open our second branch in the city here in the Governor Francis section," said Warren. "As Rhode Island's largest independent bank, we are dedicated to the people, businesses, and places that make our community special. This branch represents our commitment to serving the needs of the Warwick area."
