The project was comprised of an interior renovation that updates and makes the facility more environmentally conscious.

Some of the highlights of the project include: removal of warehouse mezzanine areas where 50% of the materials were recycled and diverted from landfills, replacement of office carpets with a material that included 25% recycled content and all bathroom fixtures were replaced with energy efficient flow models.

Paramount's project and development services team was a collaboration of Douglas DiBona as the project executive and Cramer/ Levine as the architect. DiBona said that the goal of the project was "to work with the tenant to create a more user friendly space while both improving the building environment and reducing the impact on the environment by updating it with energy efficient and recycled materials."
