Blouin promoted by Cannon Design

February 17, 2010 - Construction Design & Engineering

Cannon Design, an internationally ranked architectural, engineering and planning firm has promoted David Blouin to vice president.

Blouin has over 17 years of experience as a healthcare architect and been with Cannon Design since October 2003. In his previous position as project manager, he excelled in coordinating his team's efforts on numerous complex projects. Blouin delivers designs on time and under budget, thanks to his extensive technical background, understanding of code requirements and industry standards, and exceptional communications skills. Presently, Blouin is heading up several projects at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"For over six years now, David has utilized his expertise and skill set to produce work of the utmost quality for our clients. We are truly very lucky to have such a bright and talented architect on our staff, and announce his promotion with great pride and confidence," said Kent Turner, AIA, MRAIC, president, Cannon Design North America.

Blouin is a graduate of the Boston Architectural Center and is a certified LEED AP.
