BOND hires Noval

April 13, 2010 - Construction Design & Engineering

BOND has hired Kevin Noval as director of information technology.

Noval earned his MBA from Northeastern University and serves as chair of the Associated General Contractors of Mass., information technology committee. Formerly, Noval spent 20 years at William A. Berry & Son, Inc. as vice president and chief information officer.

With 21 years experience in the construction industry, Noval will apply his experience to the building and civil & utility divisions of BOND.

"BOND's commitment to technology, experience utilizing Building Information Modeling, and great reputation in the industry make this a great opportunity for me to learn and contribute," said Noval.

"Kevin is an industry veteran, and someone whose skills will be a great complement as we continue to grow our company," said BOND president Robert Murray. "We are very excited to have him join our team."
