Smith named president/CEO of Haley & Aldrich executive leadership team

April 21, 2010 - Green Buildings

Haley & Aldrich, one of the nation's leading geotechnical and environmental engineering consulting firms, has promoted Lawrence Smith, P.E., R.G. to president/CEO and William Fisher, P.E. to executive vice president/chief client officer. Smith and Fisher join current vice president/chief financial officer, Glen Elias, CPA, MBA to complete Haley & Aldrich's new executive leadership team.

Smith is the company's 7th president/CEO. He joined Haley & Aldrich for the second time in 1985 as a hydrogeologist and, after a series of promotions and career achievements, was named executive vice president/COO in December 2004. Since joining the firm, Smith served as an advisor to Fortune 100 industrial clients on environmental portfolio management and remedial strategy. Beginning in 2004, he instituted the Leadership Training program for new generations of Haley & Aldrich leaders, to ensure a sustainable basis of sound business principles and corporate citizenship for the company's next 50 years.

Smith takes over the role of president/CEO from Bruce Beverly, P.E., F.ASCE, who served as the firm's president/CEO from 2000 to 2010. Haley & Aldrich experienced record revenue growth in the 10 years under Beverly's guidance, who refocused the company following its regional geographic expansion to become a national consulting firm organized around markets and clients.

Beverly said, "Our new president/CEO, Larry Smith, and his executive leadership team are well prepared and strongly committed to lead Haley & Aldrich through the challenges presented by the current recession. I'm confident that Larry and his team have positioned Haley & Aldrich to grow and thrive in the future."

Fisher is the new executive vice president/chief client officer. Fisher joined Haley & Aldrich in 2003 as a vice president and environmental engineer. Fisher has lead the company's focused expansion into the electric and gas utilities market, assisting clients and communities in developing comprehensive strategies to address legacy environmental issues.

Elias joined Haley & Aldrich in 2008 as vice president /chief financial officer. He is instrumental in analyzing issues of strategic financial importance to the company and integrating industry best management practices into our finance and accounting function. Elias was inducted into the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants Business and Industry Hall of Fame in 2003.
