Schuman named Association Executive of the Year

December 07, 2007 - Connecticut

Mark Schuman, president of S&S Management Services, Inc., a Bloomfield-based association management company, was named Association Executive of the Year by the Connecticut Society of Association Executives (CSAE). Schuman is a member and past president of CSAE.

Schuman, a graduate of Hall High School in West Hartford and Boston University, has been an association executive for over 15 years and holds membership in the American Society of Association Executives (ASAE) and the AMC Institute. He is a member of the Senior Advisory Committee to the executive vice president of the American Academy of Family Physicians as well as being the executive director of The Real Estate Finance Association of Connecticut, The Connecticut Academy of Family Physicians, The Core Content Review of Family Medicine, Middlesex County Medical Association and The Tolland County Medical Association.

Schuman lives in Canton with his wife Sandi and their two children Matthew and Arianna.

Founded in 1982, CSAE is the association of association executives who manage and staff trade, professional, philanthropic and business associations and societies in the state of Connecticut, as well as representatives of those companies which provide products and services to the association market. CSAE provides professional development, educational and networking opportunities to strengthen the work of association executives and their staff. Membership is open to all association professionals and not limited to CEOs. Membership is also open to industry suppliers. For more information about CSAE, visit www.csae.net or contact us at 17 Rivendell Rd., Marlborough, CT 06447-1260.
