Flaxington of RePlay Communications specializes in phone equipment installation and service

December 13, 2007 - Rhode Island

Owner of RePlay Communications, John Flaxington began working in the phone business 27 years ago. He attended Rhode Island School of Electronics, and began working as a cable technician upon graduation. As time went on, he gradually began to work on phone installations and service of phone systems. This then eventually led him to sales of phone systems, management, and then inevitably to owning his own company.

Flaxington hopes that his customers feel they get more than the expected service at RePlay. He stresses that at RePlay Communications, they try to take all of the unknown for their customers out of the use of their phone equipment. Guiding them with knowledge of their phones, lines, and data networking systems, RepPlay bridges the gap between the outside phone lines, equipment, and data networking systems, to ensure they are all working together as one system that the customer can easily work with.

RePlay Communications specializes in Nortel and Avaya equipment installations, as well as voice, data and fiber optic networking. They offer maintenance contracts on your telephone equipment, and also buy and sell used telecommunication equipment.

RePlay Communications is located in Warwick and Foxboro.
