McNally, Bidgood, Fletcher, Rochon, Bonaccorsi and Harmoning join RF Walsh Collaborative Partners as managers

August 19, 2010 - Construction Design & Engineering

RFWalsh Collaborative Partners has added six new managers to its healthcare and education practices in addition to announcing a move to new office space.

"RFWalsh Collaborative Partners is setting the industry standard when it comes to innovative project management that puts strategic insight and planning to work early in the process, saves time and money, protects our clients' investment, and delivers a superior project," said Jack Hobbs, president and CEO of RFWalsh Collaborative Partners.

The expansion has allowed the firm to add to its capabilities in key areas including healthcare, life sciences, and education.

New additions Bill McNally, John Bidgood and Matthew Fletcher are experienced in healthcare and education projects having worked with dozens of clients including Caritas Christi Health Care, Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Millennium Pharmaceuticals, Harvard, Yale and Tufts.

Christine Rochon, Jon Bonaccorsi and Jennifer Harmoning have backgrounds in design and construction with clients including Elliot Medical Center, the Chinatown Community Education Center, Suffolk University, UMass-Lowell, Baystate Medical Center and Brigham & Women's Hospital.

At the end of June the company completed its expansion with a move to the sixth floor of 330 Congress St. in the Seaport District.
