Eastern Bank and Berkshire Bank close $26 million construction/bridge financing

January 13, 2011 - Financial Digest

Eastern Bank and Berkshire Bank recently closed $26 million in construction and bridge financing with their client, Yule Development Co., Inc. The loan proceeds are to be used for the costs associated with the preservation and adaptive reuse of an existing historic mill complex known as the Abbot Mill. Yule has plans to turn Abbot Mill into 130 residential apartment units.

"This was a smooth, yet complex closing that involved numerous parties," said Nicholas Moise, senior vice president and team leader of commercial real estate lending at Eastern Bank. "The financing structure included typical construction financing plus a facility to bridge the equity provided by the tax credit investors. Chris Yule and his team were great to work with. The project, when completed, will be one of the most attractive mill conversions that I have been involved with in my career."

"We were very pleased to work with Eastern Bank and Berkshire Bank to close a financing package that allows the flexibility to address the unique requirements of a very complicated project," said Chris Yule, of Yule Development. "In what is still considered a challenging real estate environment, the Eastern Bank approach was the one I believe allows us to successfully achieve our goals for the project."

"A collaboration of this nature helps not just the company receiving financing, but the entire community, which will benefit from the redevelopment of a historic complex," said Dennis Keefe, first vice president of commercial lending at Berkshire Bank. "Our history as a bank with strong ties to the local community made this an attractive and exciting project, of which we are excited to be a part."
