IREM unveils new credential Accredited Commercial Manager

March 10, 2011 - Rhode Island

If you are a property manager of commercial real estate, consider adding value to your professional career.

If you are an employer in a real estate management company consider the benefits to you of increased productivity, enhanced knowledge and skills, and greater contributions to your bottom line.

This certification is designed for managers of small- to mid-size commercial properties and requires that applicants manage a commercial portfolio of at least 20,000 s/f and have a minimum of 12 months of commercial real estate management experience. This is an excellent opportunity for property managers of commercial properties to enhance their knowledge, skills and professional credentials.

The Accredited Commercial Manager (ACoM) certification will help you to build upon your experiences and connect with a resource of tools and other property managers and grow as a professional property manager.

As all property manager's know, the challenges in today's job market—from industry consolidation and increased competition to being expected to do more with less—make it harder to prove experience and credibility. Achieving the IREM's Accredited Commercial Manager (ACoM) certification will give you that increased market visibility and credibility you will need with owners, investors, and employers to set you apart from the competition.

Employers value those who choose to develop their skills and who keep in touch with new solutions and technologies in the industry. The experience and knowledge you demonstrate to earn the ACoM certification assures employers that you possess the specialized skills they seek in commercial managers. Earning the ACoM certification will help you advance in your real estate management career regardless of your current level.

Achieving the ACoM certification is a process that connects you to some of the finest instructors in the field of property management, finance and marketing; providing knowledge essential to the practice of real estate management—covering the core competencies for maximum performance of investment real estate. IREM offers choices that fit you because your lifestyle and learning preferences are unique. Keep learning whether you're sitting at home, working at your desk, commuting, or traveling. Choose what works for you whether it is in a classroom, online with an instructor, or online self-paced. You can take a course in the manner that best suits your needs—where you want it, how you want it, when you want it. Learn within timeframes under your control...in the classroom, in four-week, instructor-led online offerings, or self-paced with interchangeable modes of e-reader and online and mobile supplements.

Did you know that earning the ACoM certification is a great stepping stone toward the Certified Property Manager (CPM) designation? If you are a commercial site manager and your portfolio has not yet reached the minimum size for the CPM designation, you can gain training, skills, and industry knowledge with the ACoM certification while working towards the CPM. The intermediate courses necessary for the ACoM also count toward the CPM education requirement.

Richard Hitt, CPM, is a senior property manager with Phoenix Property Management Inc., Warwick and is the president of IREM-Greater R.I. Chapter No. 88, Providence.
