Regency Centers names deVilliers leasing agent

March 24, 2011 - Retail

Regency Centers, a national owner, operator and developer of grocery-anchored and community shopping centers, has named Jack deVilliers as leasing agent in Baltimore, Maryland and the New England area. He will be responsible for leasing 13 operating properties, totaling 1.8 million s/f, in Maryland, D.C., Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Previously, deVilliers served as a retail leasing associate for commercial real estate broker KLNBRetail, handling tenant and landlord representation of new retail development projects. He exclusively represented retailers such as Kohl's, FedEx Office, Panera Bread Caf  , 7-Eleven and GNC. He also served as assistant project manager for Florida Rock Properties, a commercial real estate development company, where he concentrated on new office and warehouse development in the Baltimore/Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. deVilliers holds a degree from the University of Virginia McIntire Business Institute and a Bachelor of Arts and Science from the University of Virginia.
