Cobb Hill Construction completes pro bono work at South Church

May 05, 2011 - Northern New England

Cobb Hill Construction has completed pro bono renovation work for South Congregational Church with time and materials donated by several local companies. Cobb Hill renovated a kitchen, a bathroom, and an office in the house at 6 South State St., which is adjacent to and owned by the church. All work was done at no cost to the church.

Bathroom renovations were done by Dennis Hager, master plumber, and included the installation of handicap plumbing fixtures donated by Bow Plumbing and Heating and bath accessories by Lang Door & Hardware. All three rooms were painted by Peak Painting and vinyl composition tile flooring, donated by JDS Flooring, was installed in the enlarged kitchen and bath. The electrical system was also reworked by Irish Electric. Accountable Cleaning did the striping and sealing all of the VCT floors.

The kitchen renovations included combining the existing kitchen and the room next to it, making the space larger. A new office and handicap accessible restroom were built next to the remodeled kitchen.

Now that the project is complete, the church will move its counseling services from the basement of the church into the newly renovated space next door.

The project manager was Claude Dupuis.
