Johnson joins Harriman as designer

June 28, 2011 - Northern New England

Tyler Johnson, AIA, LEED AP has joined Harriman, a full-service architecture and engineering firm with offices in Maine and New Hampshire.

Johnson, an architectural designer, brings over five years of experience. He holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Architectural Engineering Technology from Wentworth Institute of Technology, and is an associate member of AIA, a LEED Accredited Professional, and the director of the ACE Mentoring Group for Portland, a national mentoring group that mentors high school students who are interested in pursuing architecture, engineering, or construction.

Johnson is currently working with the Oxford School District on ADA Upgrades and the NAVFAC P-282 Sub Component Facility at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard.
