Best New Workplace is given to a project that demonstrates innovation in design, use of real estate, functionality, and/or technology that has supported the organization's mission and contributed to its successful positioning in its market.

Best New Workplace (50K sf)

Ropes & Gray, LLP

Boston, MA

Ropes & Gray, LLP worked with an expert team to help design, build, furnish and move 1,400 employees into its new 475,000 square-foot Boston office at the Prudential Tower. The firm created and implemented many new approaches to ensure a smooth and successful transition from its long-time home in the city's Financial District to the new location in Back Bay. Ropes & Gray's commitment to sustainability, modern technology, open communication, an interactive and supportive work culture, and first-rate work environment is evident throughout its dynamic new workplace. Despite the significant scope and scale of the project, all of the elements were well-planned and carefully orchestrated. The space was an instant success, and it is evident through the firm's operations that Ropes & Gray is truly committed to the mission of moving forward and thinking smarter. Structure Tone, Inc. is the construction manager for the project.

2011 Best New Workplace (New Construction)

EMD Serono, Inc.

Billerica, MA

EMD Serono Inc., an affiliate of Merck KGaA of Darmstadt, Germany, is a leader in the biopharmaceutical industry, and focuses on discovering new treatments to address unmet medical needs. The project, a $65 million, 140,000-square-foot cutting-edge research and development facility, was built at EMD Serono's active research campus in Billerica, MA. The new building was connected to a 54,000 sf laboratory on the campus, which was fully operational during construction. The new facility is comprised of lab and office space, consisting of; 25,000 sf of chemistry and screening labs; 25,000 sf biology and cell culture labs; 22,000 sf of general lab support space; 20,000 sf of office and conference rooms; and 23,000 sf of mechanical and facility management spaces.

This new state of the art facility is not only LEED Gold certified, but is also designed to suit the unique needs of researchers and foster enhanced collaboration between the therapeutic areas. Before the completion of this project, the company's research operations were split between three US sites. This facility is the US research hub for EMD Serono, and has served to unite scientists under one roof. The design and functionality of this building will help facilitate communication among researchers, which could aid in the development of new and innovative therapies in the areas of oncology, neurodegenerative diseases and infertility. Jones Lang LaSalle is the construction manager for the project.
