NAI Hunneman Management & Development Company renewed as property manager of 1010 Massachusetts Ave. by the city of Boston

January 05, 2012 - Owners Developers & Managers

According to NAI Hunneman Management & Development Company, the city of Boston has awarded a property management contract to NAI Hunneman to manage 1010 Massachusetts Ave., a six-story, 220,770 s/f office building.

"We're very pleased that after a competitive bidding process, the city of Boston has chosen us to manage this important asset for the city," said Andrew Ravech, vice president of new business development at NAI Hunneman Management & Development Co. "It's a key property for the city, housing several essential municipal departments."

Located off I-93 in the city's South End, the building houses the city's Inspectional Services Department, Fire Prevention Division of the Boston Fire Department, Parks Department and Public Health Commission. In addition, the building is the second most heavily visited site for city services after City Hall. The building also accommodates offices for American Data Storage, Inc. and Boston Medical Center's Public Health Commission.

1010 Mass. Ave. is a very desirable location that is a short distance from key educational institutions such as University of Massachusetts Boston and Northeastern University as well as major junctions such as Roxbury Crossing, Bayside Expo Center, Columbus Park and Boston Medical Center Harrison and East Newton Campuses. The location features high commuter visibility and easy access to public transportation and the Massachusetts Turnpike.
