June 21, 2012 - Retail

According to Electric Supply Center (ESC), one of the region's leading distributors of electrical supplies, distribution equipment, and fixtures, David Rossman has joined their company as their new energy specialist.

"Dave brings over thirty years of experience in the electrical supply industry to ESC. His extensive background with sustainable energy practices will be a huge asset to our internal team and customers," said Larry LaFreniere, president and CEO of ESC.

Rossman, who will serve as the company's energy specialist, comes to ESC from a large electrical distributor, where his primary function was to help his clients and customers make the best use of the Mass Save programs available in Massachusetts. Mass Save helps homeowners and businesses create more energy-efficient communities by offering a wide range of services, tax incentives and rebates, trainings, and information promoting energy efficiency.
