DiCicco Gulman & Co. now accepting applications for pro bono summer of service program

June 28, 2012 - Front Section

DiCicco, Gulman & Company LLP (DGC), a CPA and business consulting firm that specializes in non-profit organizations, today announced that the firm will once again offer its pro bono Summer of Service program.

To date, the firm has donated close to 1,000 hours and assisted more than 35 nonprofit organizations in the Greater Boston area. Applications are reviewed and accepted based primarily on the scope of the work needed and staff availability. The 2012 program will run from June to September.

Nonprofit organizations can apply online at www.dgccpa.com/summerofservice.

Organizations like The Northeast Independent Living Program, Inc. (NILP) have had positive experiences with the program. They received QuickBooks training, as well as help with adjusting and reconciling account statements, setting up budget reports, and implementing best practices.

"The Summer of Service program was extremely beneficial to our organization," says Tony Goodnough, director of finance and administration for NILP. "We were able to streamline our process and develop a system that actually saves us time and money."

"We want nonprofit organizations to reach their full potential," said Don Troy, partner in charge of the nonprofit group at DGC. "The financial aspect of their organization must operate as effectively as a business. Our role is to help them concentrate on their mission and achieve their goals."

Nonprofit organizations can apply online at www.dgccpa.com/summerofservice.
