Robitaille joins Tighe & Bond as project engineer

September 20, 2012 - Construction Design & Engineering

Andrea Robitaille, P.E., joined Tighe & Bond, Inc. as a project engineer who brings eight years of experience to the firm's expanding structural engineering team. She has provided bridge design and inspection, construction design, and transportation planning services for clients and projects throughout New England.

Robitaille's wide range of experience spans from conceptual engineering through construction management and oversight. Her credentials in public policy also give her a solid understanding of client financing challenges associated with the repair and maintenance of aging infrastructure, as well as a background in determining viable solutions. This expertise gives her the capacity to develop engineering solutions that are efficient, cost-effective, and appropriate to each client's unique needs.
