Carlone takes the reins at Rhode Island Builders Association

November 08, 2012 - Rhode Island

"I have a dream of the Rhode Island Builders Association with 5,000 members, half of whom will be 40 years old or younger."

With that lofty but achievable goal, Felix Carlone of F.A. Carlone & Sons inaugurated his first term as RIBA's 34th president at the association's Annual Meeting, held at Kirkbrae Country Club, Lincoln, on October 2 before an audience of 116.

Taking office along with Carlone were vice president Roland Fiore of South County Sand & Gravel Inc., treasurer Steven Gianlorenzo of Gianlorenzo and Sons Construction Corp. and secretary David Caldwell Jr. of Caldwell & Johnson Inc.

Thanking outgoing president Bob Baldwin and RIBA executive director John Marcantonio for "preparing us for the future," Carlone laid out bold plans for his administration: Continuing to expand member services and education; aggressive recruiting, especially of younger members; strong legislative advocacy on all levels, and more.

"We are positioned to be successful in the future," said Carlone, the son of a founding member of the association.

Baldwin presented a farewell address, echoing many of Carlone's sentiments and offering thanks to the officers, board of directors, committee chairs, Marcantonio and the RIBA staff for "excellent teamwork and a job well done."

Marcantonio offered an update on RIBA matters, thanking the Annual Meeting sponsors and RIBA staff. His message: "RIBA is getting stronger all the time!"

Also taking place at the annual meeting was the "passing of the gavel" from retiring general counsel James Sloan III, who served RIBA in that position for 53 years, to his successor, attorney Christine Engustian.

Along with the new administration, other RIBA offices were filled:
