Trumbull-Nelson Construction and Banwell Architects receive award

January 03, 2013 - Northern New England

Trumbull-Nelson Construction and Banwell Architects joined a select group of twelve New Hampshire builders, architects, and landscapers who were named winners of the 2012 Building New Hampshire Awards at a ceremony. The winning entries were selected in recognition of their work to build, remodel, or retrofit an energy-efficient, high performance residence or commercial or institutional building.

The award-winning projects were designed and built to minimize their carbon footprint and impact on the environment. "The winners of the 2012 Building New Hampshire Awards are the people to watch," said Kathy Poggi, principal of Seacoast Ink and producer of the awards program. "With a sense of responsibility, they're the ones who are producing some of the most innovative, sustainable building and remodeling projects in the Granite State."
