Erland selected as construction manager for Fay School master plan

March 06, 2008 - Owners Developers & Managers

In early 2006, Fay School, the oldest junior boarding school in the country, purchased six and a half acres of property adjoining their 36-acre campus and completed a master planning process to update campus facilities, including new dormitories, athletic fields, and vehicle and pedestrian circulation. Â Â

The entire master plan will be implemented over several years. Fay School has selected Erland Construction as construction manager and preconstruction for phase 1 is currently underway. This collaboration represents the fourth time Erland has worked on the Fay campus.

Partnering with architect S/L/A/M Collaborative of Glastonbury, Conn., and Owner's Project Manager Pinck & Co., Inc, of Boston, Erland is set to begin construction in early 2008. Phase 1 will include extensive site work, a new maintenance building, a wastewater treatment facility, two wood-framed student/faculty residences, and a wellness center.
