A&O Danner Companies to manage construction of 2,500 s/f Scoop NYC

April 25, 2013 - Retail

The recently-opened Scoop NYC clothing store in Boston is the fifth high-fashion boutique since 2010 to select Stephen Danner and his A&O Danner Companies to manage construction of their shop on the city's Newbury St.

The New York City-based Scoop NYC, offers fashions for men and women from both internationally acclaimed and young emerging designers.

The shop at 177 Newbury St. occupies 2,500 s/f. Construction cost was in the $600,000 range. Other shops built by the Danner team include Jack Wills Outfitters, No Rest for Bridget, Alton Lane, and Steven Alan.

Danner said, "With each client, we work closely with store executives, architects, engineers and our contractors to bring the plan together and meet their high standards for quality - to ensure their distinct brand and image make the most dramatic impact possible. Newbury Street is an icon itself and each store wants to stand out, to become the destination for their target shoppers."

"We did the entire tenant fit-up including full electrical and lighting packages, and installation of owner-supplied millwork," said Danner.

A&O Danner, a full-service general contractor and construction manager, services commercial, retail, residential, historical renovation, and healthcare industries, and is licensed and insured in several states. About 80% of Danner's business comes from referrals or is repeat business from past clients.
