Babcock and Walsh join Diversified Project Management

July 19, 2013 - Connecticut

According to Diversified Project Management (DPM), one of New England's leading owner's representative firms, David Babcock and Matthew Walsh have joined its staff.

Babcock has joined DPM's Hartford office as project manager. Babcock is assigned exclusively to DPM's largest manufacturing house account, and will be working on a variety of facilities-related projects. A veteran of the construction industry, he spent 15 years as a superintendent with CASLE Corp. where he worked on several key projects including Hartford Hospital Wellness Center, Connecticut corporate offices, and Collinsville Savings Society.

Walsh has joined DPM in the role of project manager and will be working in the technology solutions group supporting its clients' CAFM needs. Walsh possesses several years of experience in design and relocation of manufacturing and laboratory facilities and CAFM systems management.
