Shawmut Design and Construction promotes Procino to project executive and manager

April 17, 2014 - Connecticut

Shawmut Design and Construction has promoted Ken Procino to project executive and manager of Shawmut's Connecticut office. In this role, he will provide executive level management of Shawmut's construction project operations. He will also serve as manager and direct the leadership team in the North Haven, Connecticut office, one of Shawmut's seven offices nationwide. Procino previously held senior level project management responsibilities at Shawmut, primarily for major college and university work.

In this new role, Procino will be leading preconstruction services and overseeing multiple project teams in the construction of educational, library, commercial, retail, garage, residential, corporate, historic, hospital and healthcare, cleanroom, and assisted and skilled nursing facilities, as well as city and state funded projects.

Procino graduated from Pennsylvania State University with a B.S. in Structural Design and Construction Engineering Technology. He also holds a B.S. in Construction Management. Additionally, Procino is a LEED and OSHA certified professional, and an ASHE Certified Health Constructor.

Shawmut Design and Construction is a leading construction manager currently engaged in $860 million in projects nationwide. The North Haven office serves educational, healthcare, commercial and institutional clients throughout Connecticut including Yale University, Choate Rosemary Hall and the University of Connecticut.
