Nationally renowned keynote speaker brings leadership training to Boston

June 05, 2014 - Owners Developers & Managers

As property managers and industry professionals, leadership is one of our most important assets we implement on a daily basis. This is true for managing our staffs as well as our clients. In today's society individuals, teams and organizations find themselves having to perform, produce and stay motivated in a stressful and rapidly changing environment with limited resources.

With 70% of US employees saying that they are not engaged or actively disengaged at work, organizations that will survive and thrive in today's business world know that now is the time to invest in their most valuable asset - their people.

Grow your business while you network with over 100 of the top professionals in the property management industry.

Don't miss this rare opportunity to hone your leadership skills through this interactive seminar by nationally renowned keynote speaker Steven Wiley.

Using the Civil War as a metaphor and the Battle of Gettysburg as a platform, Steven Wiley - "the best speaker you've never heard of" (ABC News) - and our esteemed faculty, deliver "the most powerful performance training available" (USA Today/Gannett). This is neither a history lesson, nor a lesson in military strategy but rather an explosive, entertaining multi-media journey into your own untapped leadership potential.

Wiley's strong leadership ability has earned him recognition in top publications including Venture Magazine, USA Today, and Entrepreneur Magazine. Wiley's speaking experience includes three years as national spokesperson for the Quaker Oats/Pritikin Longevity Centers for whom he has been featured in television commercials and advertisements in the Wall Street Journal, Chicago Tribune, Los Angeles Times and New York Times. Over the past ten years, he has conducted thousands of seminars on negotiation, sales leadership and wellness for numerous public and private sector organizations.

Wiley's clients include the majority of the Fortune 100 companies such as Apple, Shell, Stanley Black & Deck, Kellogg and Chase. They include scores of federal government agencies such as the Department of Defense and the Department of Homeland Security. We have also hosted over 75 Presidential appointees and their teams.
