Green Leaf Construction hires Griffin as project manager

December 04, 2014 - Owners Developers & Managers

Green Leaf Construction has hired Kevin Griffin as a project manager. Griffin brings years of project management experience having both worked as an owner's project manager for Construction Monitoring Services, Inc., and in construction management at Gilbane Building Company.

In his role as project manager, Griffin will be responsible for the delivery of each project he is tasked with in a manner consistent with Green Leaf's customer-focused project delivery standards. He will guide customers through the process from preconstruction to closeout. "Combined with his experience, Griffin's energy and enthusiasm for building make him a fitting addition to the Green Leaf Team," said Tom Dube, COO of Green Leaf. "We are excited to add Kevin to our team and we anticipate that his skills will not only benefit the company, but most importantly, our customers."

Green Leaf Construction is a construction management, design build and general contracting firm located in Leominster, Mass serving commercial, industrial and institutional organizations throughout the Northeast.
