Durgin of Conway Commercial handles $525,000 sale - represents seller, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, and procured the buyer, Ryder Development

December 31, 2014 - Front Section

Conway Commercial, a division of the Jack Conway & Company, Inc. has brokered the $525,000 sale of the former Immaculate Conception school on Commercial St.

Paul Durgin, vice president of Conway Commercial, represented the seller, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, and procured the buyer, Ryder Development Corp., which plans to convert the building into apartments.

The school has been closed since the early 1980s and has been the home of the Weymouth Food Pantry since 1987.

Owner Ken Ryder has agreed to allow the Food Pantry to operate in the basement of the building while it searches for a new location.
