Jewett Construction appointed an official Butler Builder

March 05, 2015 - Owners Developers & Managers

Jewett Construction Co., Inc. (JCCI) was recently appointed an official Butler Builder for southern N.H. and northern Mass. by Kansas City, MO-based Butler Manufacturing—a leader in the design and manufacture of metal building systems for commercial construction.

"It's rewarding to be partnered with a metal building company that holds the same client-based values as Jewett Construction, including the belief that a warrantee should go above and beyond," said JCCI president, Craig Jewett. "It's a partnership that offers our client base an experienced, award-winning team for their next construction project."

And it's a partnership that seems only natural. JCCI is one of only a handful of area design-build firms with its own specialized in-house erecting crew—the five-year-old Jewett Metal Buildings & Steel Erectors division—which provides professional, pre-engineered metal building sales, installation and consulting; erects structural steel; and provides welding and miscellaneous metals work to clients all over New England. For its part, Butler Manufacturing was founded in 1907 as a maker of galvanized steel grain bins, later introducing the country's first complete line of rigid frame buildings, and has since grown into North America's premier leader in the manufacture of pre-engineered buildings with an international presence in major cities worldwide.

"Everyone at Butler is excited about teaming up with Jewett Construction, and we look forward to a long successful relationship with one of New England's outstanding design-build general contractors," said Jack Woeller, Butler area manager.

JCCI is a Raymond, NH-based design-build/construction management firm specializing in commercial and industrial projects throughout the Northeast. Clients include such well-known organizations as Commonwealth Motors, the Exeter Area YMCA, SIGSAUER, and the Herb Chambers Companies.
