April 16, 2015 - Construction Design & Engineering

JM Coull recently completed a 7,700 s/f addition to the Faith Evangelical Free Church, located at 54 Hosmer St. The new space comprises a large multipurpose room for church meetings, athletics, and recreational activities. Classrooms, a new office suite and kitchen are also included in the new building.

JMC installed a new sprinkler system in the existing portion of the church. Significant site work, including the construction of a new septic and drainage system, utilities, rain collection recharge system, and parking lot, was also performed. Ben Revette, PE, director of telecommunications in Dewberry's Boston office, was elected to the New England Wireless Association's (NEWA) board of directors. In his two-year term, Revette will be responsible for targeting areas for growth and further promoting collaboration within the wireless community.

Revette has extensive telecommunications experience, and manages Dewberry's telecommunications group in the engineering, design, and construction of a variety of wireless telecommunications facilities and distributed antenna systems (DAS) throughout the country. These DAS projects include major tunnel and transit systems, large sports and convention venues, and university campuses.

"I'm excited to be a part of the inaugural board of directors for NEWA," said Revette. "My goal will be to increase membership and promote the organization to the wireless community."

NEWA is a community of wireless industry professionals working together to benefit the industry and deliver the promise of wireless broadband across the nation.
