David Cannistraro of J.C. Cannistraro, LLC named president of the National Subcontractors Alliance

May 01, 2015 - Owners Developers & Managers

According to J.C. Cannistraro, LLC, the company's CEO David Cannistraro has been named president of the National Subcontractors Alliance (NSA). As a past president and current board member of the Associated Subcontractors of Massachusetts(ASM), the local member organization of NSA, Cannistraro played an active role in the passage of Massachusetts' Prompt Pay Act. This legislative achievement is one example of the many policy and business-related activities performed by the individual professional associations that make up the NSA.

As president, Cannistraro is eager to help raise awareness for the organization by adopting the use of technology-based communications tools such as social media, and looks forward to engaging his fellow specialty contractors and association leaders from around the U.S. through information sharing and advocacy. As their company continues to grow and build national brand recognition, Cannistraro's leadership and representation helps to solidify their presence as a thought leader in our industry.
