New CoreNet Global Board of Directors is globally diverse group

May 15, 2008 - Front Section

Nokia's Mark Tamburro of the United Kingdom is the new chairman of CoreNet Global's board of directors, the 7000-member international association of corporate real estate and workplace executives. Tamburro took office when the new board year started on May 12th, at the close of the CoreNet Global San Diego Summit.

Tamburro, vice president of Workplace Resources for Nokia in their Farnborough office succeeds Sun Microsystems senior vice president David Harris, MCR, as chairman.

Tamburro will serve with board members from a spectrum of the corporate real estate industry, including corporate end users, service providers and an economic developer. It's a globally diverse group which hails from the U.S., Canada, Great Britain, Hong Kong and Australia. Tamburro is the first non-American elected chairman.

Barry Varcoe of The Royal Bank of Scotland was elected as the chair-elect for the new board year. He will succeed Tamburro as chairman in 2009.

Stephen Stoner, managing director - Central Region, First Industrial Realty Trust, who was appointed treasurer, and Harris of Sun as immediate past chairman, round out the officers' positions on the Board of Directors.
