The Office Building Show, produced by BOMA International and Buildings Magazine: June 22-24th in Denver Colo.

May 27, 2008 - Front Section

Denver CO How are building owners and managers optimizing performance and driving value in their buildings?

Find out as the industry's leading suppliers converge at The Office Building Show, produced by BOMA International and Buildings Magazine, to showcase cutting-edge products and services that are taking commercial buildings to the next level.

And let's not forget the hottest topic in real estate—"greening and energy efficiency. An entire section of The Office Building Show has been set aside as the Green Pavilion and Energy Star Showcase, where you'll find tons of green story ideas.

Also, don't miss the year's most important conversation on sustainability. Monday's general session, Market Transformation: Leadership + Operational Excellence = Green ROI, is a thought-provoking, in-depth town hall discussion with the five visionaries who are setting new standards for reducing energy consumption, implementing green management practices and realizing a positive financial return on green initiatives.

Panelists include: Rick Fedrizzi, president and CEO, U.S. Green Buildings Council; Catherine Greener, vice president of consulting, Saatchi & Saatchi S; Ira Magaziner, chairman, Clinton Climate Initiative; Sally Wilson, global director of environmental strategy, CB Richard Ellis; and Brenna Walraven, executive managing director of national property management, USAA Real Estate Company and chairman of BOMA International.

The BOMA International Conference and The Office Building Show is also where you'll find the industry's best and most comprehensive education. With more than 40 sessions organized around five strategic tracks, you can report on emerging trends and strategies property professionals are using to sustain their businesses through this challenging market cycle.

The BOMA International Conference and The Office Building Show is, June 22 - 24th, in Denver, Colorado.
