Boston, MA Brian Mulkerrin, PE, founding partner and president of e3i Engineers, Inc. has been elected to the Adelphia Design Alliance board of directors.

Headquartered in San Antonio, the Adelphia Design Alliance is an association of independent, full-service, small and mid-sized North American engineering and architectural design firms. With member firms located in 70 cities across North America, the Alliance represents more than 1,600 professional engineers and architects operating in 71 offices across seven countries.

Adelphia's goal is to collaboratively market member companies to viably compete with mega-firms on large, complex projects that might otherwise be out of reach.

"I truly believe we can make our industry better through the Adelphia Design Alliance, as it levels the playing field between smaller and larger firms," said Mulkerrin. "I love that I get to work with other like-minded people and their companies across North America who are passionate about client service, 'bend my brain' challenge, and push me to be a better engineer, leader and business owner. I'm thrilled to help lead this organization and extend opportunities to other firms like ours – and compete on larger, more complex projects."
