Quincy City Council approves LBC project

May 05, 2017 - Owners Developers & Managers

Quincy, MA The Quincy City Council unanimously voted to move forward on the development and reconstruction of 1500 Hancock St., a 153,000 s/f mixed-use project proposed by LBC Boston Partners Props. LBC officials said that with the vote on Tuesday, construction can begin immediately with demolition of the current site set to begin by the end of next month. The project still needs final approval from the city's planning commission, which is expected to take up the issue soon.

"We couldn't be happier and this project really shows what can be done when city government and private businesses work together to achieve common goals," said LBC managing partner Andrian Shapiro.

The council approved a land swap, called a land disposition agreement, between LBC and the city, trading a city-owned lot behind the property for developer-owned frontage which will be made into wider sidewalks, a public atrium and open pedestrian space.

"The plan has evolved tremendously to meet all the city's objectives and issues," said Alex Matov, LBC managing partner. "But it's now better than ever and a truly impressive project."

The $40 million project includes 171 new apartments and nearly 15,000 sq. ft. of commercial space with restaurants, healthcare facilities and specialty store tenants.
