Andrews named principal at Centerbrook

July 21, 2017 - Connecticut

Todd Andrews, Centerbrook
Architects & Planners

Centerbrook, CT According to Centerbrook Architects & Planners, Todd Andrews, AIA, has become the firm's newest principal.

Andrews came to Centerbrook in 1996 upon graduation from Syracuse University School of Architecture. Andrews' diverse design experience includes buildings that support and enhance education, learning, research, worship and community. A principal focus has been his work on more than 20 projects at world-renowned Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory.

Andrews joins the firm's principal group that includes Jefferson Riley, FAIA, Mark Simon, FAIA, Chad Floyd, FAIA, and Jim Childress, FAIA. He is the first new principal to join the firm's ownership since Childress in 1996.

"Todd's leadership and refined design skills are invaluable assets to our clients and the firm," Childress said.
