What trends are you seeing so far this year: From my vantage point managing both a parking garage and a park, I see the traditional 9 to 5 office day changing. This year, we're seeing a dramatic drop in the number of cars staying in our garage all day. There is no longer a noticeable morning and evening "rush", instead we see steady traffic all day. People are spending less time at their offices. There are more people on the sidewalks and in our park all day - not just at lunchtime. The increasingly fluid schedule is changing the financial district. This trend seems healthier for people, and hopefully for retail, restaurant and service businesses as well.
