Agawam, MA Colliers Project Management has hired Tony DiLuzio as senior project manager.

DiLuzio will manage and deliver client focused owner's project management (OPM) services, continuing the growth of Colliers Project Management's municipal client base, throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and Southern New England.

An accomplished project management professional, DiLuzio brings over 25 years of knowledge and experience to the team. His creative problem solving and cost-effective project solutions will bring added value to cities and towns and their municipal building projects. DiLuzio's resume of school, town hall, library, and athletic projects is only surpassed by his expertise and specialty focus in police, fire and public safety facilities.

"As a leading OPM firm in Massachusetts, Colliers' team approach, strength and diversity of its staff and client focused service delivery are what attracted me to join them – I look forward to bringing this level of depth and service to my clients," DiLuzio stated.

"Having an individual with Tony's depth of knowledge and client service history join our ranks will greatly increase our ability to better understand clients' underlying issues and concerns, and allow us to provide better solutions to address their needs. His background and drive will bring valuable insight to clients and continue to position us as a leader in owner's project management services," said Marc Sklenka, Senior Director, Project Management, "I'm excited to have Tony as part of the team."

DiLuzio earned an Associate and Bachelor of Science degree in Architectural Engineering from Wentworth Institute of Technology, and has studied at Boston Architectural Center. Tony is MCPPO certified and active in Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association and Fire Chiefs Association of Massachusetts.
