Hartford, CT Procore teamed up with Plans4Less.com, the nation's leading source for reprographics services at a fixed rate. Anyone in a construction-related industry who uses software/printing applications will feel the same way once they try it out.

The brains behind the three-year-old Plans4Less.com concept is Brian Burke who has spent his entire career working to improve the world of reprographics and printing. "On pricing, we've turned back the clock," said Burke, "But on technology, we're firmly focused on tomorrow."

This past year, Plans4Less.com was selected to join Procore's "AppMarketplace" where a selection of apps extends the functionality of Procore's product and the systems its clients already know and use.

At the Procore ground break event, attendees met Burke and learned about Plans4Less.com first-hand. The event drew over 2,000 construction industry professionals.

One visitor to Burke's exhibit was Scott Sanders, senior project manager for D. E. Harvey, a large Houston-based general contractor. Harvey's client roster includes such iconic names as Allstate, American Red Cross, Baylor University, Coca-Cola, Dell and Dow Chemical, to name a few.

D. E. Harvey uses Procore to manage construction projects. Sanders said, "We found value and savings by using the Procore Integration with Plans4Less. We like how we can order plans from Plans4Less right from the construction management software. We use their national network of print partners and appreciate their no-surprises fixed-rate pricing. Now that we're combining Procore software with Plans4Less.com, we're getting the lowest document printing prices and fastest turnaround possible."
