Caldwell & Walsh steps in to help St. Raphael's Hospital by delivering negative air machines

April 08, 2020 - Connecticut

Fairfield, CT Caldwell & Walsh, a northeast commercial construction company, has stepped in to help St. Raphael's Hospital, a division of Yale New Haven Health. Caldwell & Walsh delivered negative air machines to assist with their patient care needs, in these unsettling times in the healthcare industry. Michael Ferrone, a long time local resident, is owner and president of the firm and immediately saw a need to give back to his community and partners. "Without hesitation, I met with our leadership team to figure out how we can help our healthcare clients during this crisis and immediately began calling and offering what we can to assist them in these trying times" said Ferrone. "Everyone is going through this in the world and if everyone does their part, to think of others, we will get through this together and come out stronger than ever."
