Wherren named Nobis' health and safety officer

May 01, 2020 - Northern New England

Jeremy Wherren

Concord, NH Nobis Group has added Jeremy Wherren as corporate health and safety officer.

An advisor to clients throughout the U.S., China, Mexico, and the UK, Wherren brings over 20 years of environmental health and safety (EHS) compliance experience, as well as corporate process improvement and quality management expertise including OSHA's Voluntary Protection Program, ISO Management Systems Standards, Lean, and Six Sigma. Wherren is a Certified Safety Professional (CSP), Certified Hazardous Materials Manager (CHMM), and Certified Manager of Quality/Operational Excellence (CMQ/OE).

He will be responsible for administering Nobis' overall corporate health and safety program, while also fulfilling a leadership role in Nobis' growing EHS practice.

"We're thrilled to have Jeremy on the Nobis team. Keeping our employees and workplaces safe is of the utmost importance every day. And in today's world, we're being asked more and more to solve challenging EHS compliance issues for our clients. Having Jeremy on board greatly expands our EHS practice, helping us continue to deliver solutions and value to our clients," said Pete Delano, P.E., senior vice president of Nobis.
