Built in 1839, the Joseph E Fletcher Home is one of the last true estates on the East Side. This Victorian home is filled with period details throughout the floor plan.

A pair of oak doors welcomes you to the main house where the entry foyer captivates guests with its coffered gold leaf ceiling and dramatic staircase. Sit by the marble wood-burning fireplace in the parlor or in the quiet library accessed via a pair of pocket doors.

The second floor provides five large bedrooms and three full baths, as well as a relaxing sitting room that opens to a large balcony overlooking the over half an acre lot and carriage house.

An interior balcony on the upper level overlooks the ballroom with a custom built-in wet bar, set underneath an arched ceiling.
