Studio G Architects promotes two and hires three new employees

June 18, 2021 - Construction Design & Engineering

Boston, MA Studio G Architects is excited to announce two promotions and three new hires.

Keihly Moore, AIA and Rachel Lehr, AIA have both been promoted to staff architect. Keihly earned a master of architect and urban design degree from the University of North Carolina – Charlotte. She is a Certified Passive House Consultant and co-chair of Studio G's AIA2030/Sustainability Committee, leading by example to bring sustainability and high performance to each project. Lehr earned a master of architecture degree from UMass Amherst in 2015, and shortly after joined Studio G. Lehr enthusiastically engages with every client to bring their vision to life. She directs her considerable energies to resolving architectural challenges and applying thoughtful design strategies for housing, educational and other civic projects at a variety of scales.

Recent new hires, Sam Maloney, Ali Horowitz, AIA, and Sally Gibson, AIA, each bring their own unique and valuable experience to our design and senior project management team.

Maloney joined Studio G on March 1st as a designer II. He graduated from Wentworth Institute of Technology and has been designing housing projects for 3.5 years. Maloney brings experience in master planning for large housing projects, and creative conceptual design skills to our housing and educational/civic studios.

Horowitz, a licensed architect, has a degree from Northeastern University. Her prior experience includes work on the new Boston Arts Academy, focused on the auditorium, art gallery, and other performance and presentation-oriented spaces. She is the current president of the Boston chapter of the National Organization of Minority Architects (BosNOMA). Horowitz started on March 8th as staff architect in the education/civic studio.

Gibson, AIA, joined our team on May 10th as a senior project architect/manager. With over 30 years of experience, she brings a diverse mix of project typologies to the education/civic studio. Horowitz's past client collaborations include UMass Amherst, Harvard, and Northeastern as well as Dicerna Pharmaceuticals.

and Logan International Airport.

Sally brings management skills and entrepreneurial spirit to Studio G from the experience of owning her own firm for 10 years.

“Studio G continues to grow in both team and project size,” said Gail Sullivan, Managing Principal of Studio G. “Our promotions and recent hires in our Housing and Education/Civic studios express our commitment to delivering great design in truly sustainable buildings for our clients and the communities in which we work.”

“Sally, Sam and Ali are tremendous additions to Studio G’s team,” said Sullivan. “Each brings a commitment to design excellence and to our vision of people-centered, place-specific and innovative sustainable design. Their varied experience and skills have dovetailed beautifully with others on our project teams.”
