What trends will dominate your industry in the coming months? Collaboration. While collaboration has been a buzz word for years, not until recently have we truly exercised this and seen the benefits of removing workplace silos. The pace of development and technology means that traditional methods are no longer effective, and we must work together for a common goal. As an owner's representative, we look pragmatically at what it takes to make a project successful and support the project team to enact a plan. At the end of the day, it's not just about the building, but about the experience for everyone involved with the project.
