teams on the successful executions of the Hudson Yards Eastern Rail Yards, Lantern House, 15 Central Park West and other signature projects in New York City.

And Suffolk hired Kevin Sharkey as executive vice president of national business development. Sharkey will be responsible for leading and executing business development strategies to help expand Suffolk's reach and build their relationships.

"The real estate and construction industry continues to change rapidly. Rather than simply react to these changes, Suffolk has undergone an exciting expansion and re-invention that will position us for future success and growth," said John Fish, chairman and CEO of Suffolk. "One of the most critical ingredients of sustainable success is strong leadership. Suffolk's hiring of Charley, Mike and Kevin reflect a strong commitment to our 'Invest/Innovate/Build' strategy. We are confident our organization is on the right path toward transforming our industry and redefining what it means to be a builder."
