Henderson named director of operations for Fulcrum Associates

January 21, 2022 - Front Section

Amherst, NH According to Fulcrum Associates, Dave Henderson has been promoted to director of operations. Henderson brings 24 years of hands-on project management and leadership experience in the construction industry, bringing a wealth of knowledge with him to his new position at Fulcrum.

Fulcrum president Daryl Luter said, "As Fulcrum moves into the next generation, Dave has made it incredibly clear as to his commitment to the organization and its success. Sharing the vision of the company and recognizing where we can improve as a Team. Dave recognizes success and empowers his coworkers, leading by example every step of the way. They say a good leader motivates and inspires their Team to be the best, to never get discouraged, always knowing that someone has your back. As Director of Operations, there is no doubt that Dave will apply the full force of his ability and help to lead this company into the future. Congrats Dave!"

After graduating from Wentworth Institute of Technology, Henderson began his career working as project manager for several well-known construction firms in the New England.

During his career, Henderson has been involved in the construction management of numerous renovations and new construction building projects in the corporate commercial, institutional, medical, industrial and hospital environments within the framework of design-build, construction management, and stipulated sum contracts.

Henderson joined Fulcrum in 2019 as senior project manager. As an established leader within the Fulcrum team, he is known for his critical thinking skills and always putting the client first. Shortly after joining the Fulcrum team, Henderson was brought onto the project team for one of the largest construction projects in NH for BAE Systems in Manchester. He was fittingly promoted to director of project management in February of 2021 after successfully leading the Fulcrum team through the duration of the project at BAE Systems and has become an integral part of Fulcrum's leadership team.

"Dave has proven to be an asset to our company with his integrity, clear focus, and ability to use the resources at hand to solve problems. Dave has the ability to guide towards a well-defined vision by clearly communicating short- and long-term goals. This form of leadership cultivates into a group of competent, and confident individuals who excel at client satisfaction and overall success. Dave is ambitious and passionate about his work, and we are fortunate to have him on our team," said Karen Massone, director of human resources.
