2022 Women in Construction: Amanda Warren, Assistant Project Manager at Haynes Construction Company

March 25, 2022 - Spotlights

Amanda Warren

What was your greatest professional achievement or most notable project in the last 12 months? Over the last 12 months my greatest professional achievement is the direct positive impact I have been able to contribute to the people in need within affordable housing. Being able to navigate numerous challenges with design changes, constructability issues as well as subcontractor management to support a positive outcome for numerous individuals. Being able to be part of a team to help multiple communities and the betterment of housing for so many families is a reward of its own.

Within your firm, who has helped you succeed within the industry? How have they helped you? My company has many people that are beyond helpful each day. One sticks out from the rest, my operations manager Bruce. He has been there to help me grow into a better leader, believe in me when I didn't believe in myself, and help me reach my goals. Construction is an ever-changing industry and there is so much to learn. Bruce has helped me further my knowledge of the industry, help incorporate me into further education, helped me develop and fine tune my skills and abilities to help me be a positive part of my project team.

What tips or advice would you offer to other women who are considering entering the construction industry? Working in construction is one of the most fulfilling jobs. To be part of a team that creates and execute great projects that people can enjoy for years is very rewarding. The sense of accomplishment from the completion of a project is like no other. You get to work together and meet a wide variety of people that can help develop and refine your skills. If you are looking for a rewarding, fast paced, ever changing career then construction is for you. Learn as much as you can from everyone you encounter, it will all be worth it!
