Kevan of TFMoran to retire at end of year

December 09, 2022 - Northern New England

Jeff Kevan

Bedford, NH After 30 years at TFMoran, Inc., Jeffrey Kevan, principal and civil engineering department manager, plans to retire at the end of 2022.

“I have worked at TFMoran for nearly 30 years, almost half of that time in a leadership capacity, and since 2013 as a principal. I feel privileged to have worked with such a talented group of people,” said Kevan.

TFMoran president Bob Duval said, “We wish Jeff the very best in his retirement. Throughout his tenure, we have all benefited from his engineering expertise and strong commitment to our clients. Over the years, his many contributions have helped make TFMoran the strong and well-respected company we are today. In the past few years, Jeff helped us put together a smooth and seamless transition team, as a result Nick Golon, PE in our Bedford office, will be assuming Jeff’s role of civil engineering department manager, and continuing Jeff’s strong tradition of civil engineering excellence.”

Golon has over 21 years of experience in civil engineering, with the last 16 years at TFMoran. His engineering background includes a diverse cross-section of projects in the residential, commercial, industrial, and energy markets, ranging up to several hundred million dollars in value.

Golon said, “Although Jeff will be greatly missed, we look forward to building upon the foundation he has helped create here at TFMoran. The company is well-positioned to continue its growth as an industry leader, a testament to the legacy he so well deserves.”
